KENYON COLLEGE

PUBLIC AFFAIRS CONFERENCE CENTER

GAMBIER, OHIO 43022

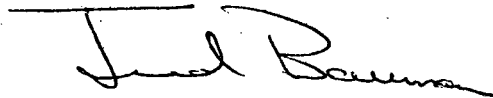

March 12, 1982

Dear Mr. Casey:

Last Spring, the Public Affairs Conference Center held a symposium here at Kenyon College on the subject of Human Rights and American Foreign Policy. Papers were presented by a distinguished group of public officials and academics which illuminated the profound and timely issues at stake from a variety of perspectives across the political spectrum as well as at different levels of particularity and theoretical sweep. The enclosed volume represents the book that we have now published on the basis of the symposium. The essays, you will note, include among them contributions by current leading policy makers and academic theorists. Some of the essays address current policy issues directly, some treat the deeper theoretical questions and two give detailed historical examinations of test cases in human rights policy, one involving comparison of North and South Vietnam, the other, treating a nineteenth century example, but deriving from it guidelines for current policy.

Thanks to a grant from the Sarah Scaife Foundation, the PACC has been able to publish this volume swiftly and to make it available to you and many of your colleagues. I believe that you and members of your staff will find its essays provocative, manysided and useful in formulating and developing policy in an unusually vexed and complicated issue of foreign policy.

Sincerely,

Fred Baumann
